Section C: Comprehension (10 marks)

Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow.

David jumped when he heard a loud noise downstairs, above the sound of the howling wind. He stopped reading and went to the top of the stairs.

"Dad, is that you?" he called. David waited but there came no answer.

"The wind must have blown open the front door again," David mumbled to himself, as he headed downstairs. He probably had not closed it tight enough 5 when he was calling his dog in.

Suddenly, the lights went out! David was startled. It was pitch-dark and David had to grope his way around towards the front door. Just before he reached it, the light from a flash of lightning silhouetted a hulking figure just outside. David stood there, frozen in fright. A few seconds later, there was 10 another flash of lightning. This time, the figure was aggressively trying to break down the door as he waved something desperately in the air. David's scream was drowned out by a long roll of thunder.

David ran for the stairs in the darkness, stumbling on the first step and cracking his knee. He cried out as he limped up the stairs and hobbled into the 15 living room. His heart was pounding and he knew he definitely needed to find a way to escape. Just then, he heard something — thump, thump — thump — the heavy tread of someone coming up the stairway. As David felt around the room, in search of the telephone, he wished with all his heart that this nightmare would come to an end soon.

Section H : Comprehension (10 marks)

Read the passage carefully and answer questions 41 to 47.

Rhonda might not be smart enough to pass the test, but she was clever enough to get away with cheating on it. As Rhonda passed by Sunil on the way to her desk, she winked and let fall a tiny slip of paper. It drifted down like a feather and settled lightly upon Sunil's desk. The test answers! Sunil peeked over at the 'pencil woman' but she had not noticed, she was too busy 5 grading Rhonda's test now, making check mark after check mark and nodding her head. So the answers were indeed the right ones and here they sat on his desk!

Sunil had no idea how hard the test would be. No matter that he had resisted, no matter that he had chosen this seat precisely to avoid this 10 situation, here he was, staring at a slip of paper that contained the key to his hopes. All he had to do was turn it over and look at the answers. The other children were too busy sniffing and biting their fingernails to notice and if he hurried, he might even copy the answers down before the 'pencil woman' looked up again. She had finished grading Rhonda's paper and was 15 concentrating on the next script. Sunil stared a long moment at the paper, sorely tempted.

Then, he reached out and flicked it from his desk and onto the floor. What good would those opportunities do him if he was not qualified to be given them? And where was the pleasure in cheating? If he could not pass fairly, he 20 did not want to pass. He thought this – and mostly believed it – and felt his spirits boosted by the decision. But even so, a few seconds passed before he could tear his eyes from the paper on the floor. "All right," he told himself, returning to the test, "get a move on, Sunil, and don't look back. There's no time to waste!"
