Comprehension

Read the passage below and answer questions 15 to 22 based on the passage.

A moose went for a drink and saw his reflection in the water. "What magnificent antlers I have!" he exclaimed proudly. Then, he looked down at his legs and sighed.

"What's wrong?" asked a fish.

"I hate my long and thin legs. I would rather have no legs like you," 5 groaned the moose.

"I doubt it," replied the fish, but before it could say more, the forest was filled with the barking of hunting dogs.

The moose took to his heels and fled like the wind to safety. Just as he thought he was safe, his antlers got caught in the branches of a tree. 10 They caused a nest to fall off the tree.

"Don't struggle," called a bird, "or you'll become more tangled! The dogs will be here and those antlers will be the death of you."

Though the moose's every instinct was to struggle, he took the bird's advice. Calmly, he managed to free himself and return safely to his 15 family.

The moose heaved a sigh of relief and said, "I've just realised something. The part of me I was most proud of was nearly the death of me and the part I despised most has saved me."

Section G (5 x 2m)

Comprehension Open

Read the passage below and answer questions 35 to 39.

My cousin, Beatrice, and I had gone out to watch Queen Victoria's coronation procession. Everyone was jostling and shoving to get a better view. Beatrice was cross because her new silk dress was getting crumpled.

"I cannot put up with the crowd," grumbled Beatrice. "Let's go home." 5

I nodded. "We'll see better from your balcony." We hurried back to where Beatrice lived. As we reached her gate, Beatrice suddenly gripped my arm and pointed at something huddled in the garden. I peered over to where she was pointing. It looked like a pile of old rags.

"It's moving," Beatrice whispered. 10

To my astonishment, it was a boy scrambling to his feet. I had seen poor people before, but never so thin and dirty.

The boy stepped back, shielding his face with his hands and said, "Don't hit me. I have done nothing."

"We're not going to hurt you, I promise," I said. 15

Beatrice made a grab at my arm, "Come away, Olivia. He's crawling with lice."

I ignored her and stepped nearer to the boy. One thing that really drew my attention was a cut across his cheek.

"Who hurt you?" I asked. 20

The boy coughed, and replied, "Old Sam, the supervisor at the match factory where I work. He got the belt out and whipped me this morning."

Beatrice interrupted him, "He must have had a reason for beating you."

The boy turned to look at her. "He hit me because I fell. Old Sam 25 doesn't like anyone fainting, or getting sick." He coughed again. "I'll never go back to the factory. I want a better life for myself and find other work."
