Section H (4 x 2 m)

Comprehension Open

Read the passage below and answer questions 39 to 42. Your answers must be based on the passage.

Mr Lee was the wealthiest man in the neighbourhood. He lived in a large, grand-looking house that was surrounded by a beautiful garden. However, he was also the most selfish man there. As a result, none of his neighbours liked him.

If any of his neighbours asked him to contribute money for a new school building or to help poor families in the community, he would glare at them and snap, "Why should I donate money to help anybody? I work hard for it, so I will not give it away to anyone." It was no surprise that he had no friends at all.

One evening, while he was watching television, Mr Lee fell asleep on his sofa and had a dream. He saw a wooden coffin in front of him. A man who looked rather familiar lay in it. A few people were standing around and chatting with each other. Nobody was upset about the death of the man. He heard somebody saying, "Mr Lee was such a stingy man. He kept all his money to himself. Now that he is dead, of what use is all that money to him?" Mr Lee then realised that the man in the coffin was none other than himself! He woke up from his nightmare, his heart pounding very hard and fast.

The next morning, Mr Lee donated a large sum of money to an old folks' home. The money was used to buy new pillows and blankets for the old folks. When Mr Lee saw that his thoughtful act made so many people smile, he felt very happy. From then on, Mr Lee often helped the needy people around him.

All answers must be in complete sentences.

39. From paragraph one, why did Mr Lee's neighbours dislike him?

40. What does it in line 7 refer to?

41. Which sentence shows that Mr Lee's dream shocked him?

42. Why were the old folks in the old folks' home happy?
