In 2005, a Swedish couple named their newborn after their favourite technology company- Google. The boy was named Oliver Google Kai. Compared with decades ago, parents are choosing less common names for their children. It suggests an emphasis on uniqueness and individualism. This trend in unusual baby naming could be a sign of a change in culture from one that applauded fitting in to one of being unique and standing out.

For the last two centuries, we have seen names rise and fall in popularity. However, it has not always been like this. For centuries, name giving was determined by custom. Most babies were given one of only a few names that were handed down from one generation to the next. Over time, the influence of the extended family and the position of honour traditionally held by older people has weakened. As a result, given names associated with the elderly became less attractive to new parents. With the spread of literacy, people came across a much wider variety of names. Increasingly, parents are following the trend to give unusual names.

It was the December holidays. Remy and his family decided to go for a vakaytion in (40)

Egypt, the land of the Pharoahs. Egypt is a place rich in history. His first glympse of the pyramids was on the first morning as he woke up at the hotel. He opened the curtains in the room and was greeted by a maquestik sight.

(41)

(42)

During the second day of their stay, Remy visited the pyramids. They are awesome structures build by the ancient Egyptians. They did so with their bare hands using only primitif tools.

(43)

(44)

When Remy reached the pyramids in the afternoon, the stones on the pyramids reflected the sun's light and they shine like jewels. He was in awe at the wonderful sight.

(45)

(46)

He never thought he would be lucky enough to be walking amongst it.

(47)

After visiting the pyramids, Remy saw a shed offer camel rides. Remy had never seen a camel in his life. Remy beg his parents to allow him to ride the camel. Eventually, they relanted. There was a long queue for the camel ride. After thirty minutes, it was finally

(48)

(49)

(50)

Remy's turn. The ride was very bumpy but the camel walked stedili on the uneven terrain.

Remy enjoyed himself very much and wished he could go there again.

The rise in the use of plastic bags has a negative impact on the environment. The growing concerns about the devastating effect of plastic waste have _____ (51) some major cities in the world to ban plastic bags. Others _____ (52) charging for the use of plastic bags. Following the _____ (53) of these cities, Singapore's supermarket chains are now in discussion to see if they can agree to implement a plastic bag surcharge too.

Shoppers can expect to start paying for plastic bags once an agreement has been reached. The _____ (54) of each plastic bag could be between five cents and ten cents.

Shoppers get 820 million plastic bags from supermarkets each year. That works out to be an _____ (55) of 146 plastic bags for each person. These bags can _____ (56) the land area of 126 Gardens by the Bay. It is likely that the amount of wastage has risen _____ (57) the population of Singapore has increased.

Only seven per cent of plastic waste was recycled _____ (58) a huge amount of plastic waste was generated last year. Plastic bags can be placed in recycling bins if _____ (59) are not contaminated with food waste. However, non-recycled plastic bags are burnt. The burning of plastic _____ (60) carbon dioxide, which contributes to the warming of the planet.

Excessive use _____ (61) plastic bags could also clog up Singapore's only landfill, on Pulau Semakau. Ash residue from the burning of waste is sent to the landfill, which is filling up at a rapid rate and may become _____ (62) as early as 2035. As a result, there will not be enough space for future wastes in the landfill.

If supermarket chains decide to impose a plastic bag levy, there would definitely be a significant impact. While consumers said they would prefer not to be charged for plastic bags, a levy would spur them to _____ (63) for alternatives. As of now, the only _____ (64) is that the surcharge could affect the lower-income _____ (65). Thus, the industry is still assessing the feasibility of other plastic bag reduction measures.

Justin bit his lower lip as he made his way to the canteen in school. Rubbing his clammy hands against his sides, he drew out a pen from his pencil case. He hastily scribbled some notes on a piece of paper from a reference book. Having been busy with his swimming practice, he did not have time to study for the open-book science topical test. Angela, who was sitting behind him, quietly observed what he was doing.

Soon, the first bell rang, signalling the start of the school day. Justin folded the paper and pushed it into his pocket. He pressed against his shirt pocket as he walked briskly towards his classroom. Before he entered the classroom, he suddenly hid behind the door and took out his textbook from his bag. Angela who had been trailing behind him diverted her gaze to Justin's hand as he skilfully unfolded the paper and slotted it into his textbook. He left his bag outside the classroom and walked in confidently with his textbook and pencil case.

10

Angela tapped on Justin's shoulder gently and whispered, "Do you have anything to surrender?" Justin, startled by the tap, turned around and shook his head. "Do you really not have anything to surrender? I saw you slotting something in your textbook," Angela said. Justin quickly thought of a reply to dismiss what she had said. Pointing at the textbook, he mumbled that a page had fallen off and he was slotting it back in. Angela raised an eyebrow and kept quiet.

15

"Good morning! The test is going to start soon. Please ensure that you do not bring in materials other than your textbook and pencil case," Mr Lim, the science teacher, announced. Angela, who was sitting behind Justin, kicked his chair. Knowing that Justin was ignoring her, she kicked it again. Justin moved his chair closer to his table. Deep inside, he knew that it was wrong, but he had to do it. When the test started, Justin heaved a sigh of relief, knowing that Angela did not tell on him and that he could finally do his test in peace.

20

During the test, Justin carefully flipped the pages of his textbook. Beads of cold sweat formed on his forehead. He slowly scanned his surroundings, checking if anyone would notice what he was doing. He knew that what he was doing was wrong, but he could not bear to face the wrath of his parents at home if he failed the test. He nervously placed the textbook on his lap and tilted it towards him before looking at the notes that he had written on that piece of paper. His confidence grew by the second as he filled in the blanks on the test paper while using his side vision to read the words on the piece of paper.

25

Upon handing in her script, Angela quickly grabbed Justin by his arm and whispered, "You should own up to Mr Lim on what you have done. You have always been a good person." Justin sat back and exhaled deeply. He looked down at his Monitor badge and sighed. Angela reminded him to do the right thing once again before leaving the classroom for recess.

After the break was over, Justin walked towards the teacher's desk. "I cheated during the topical test," he muttered to Mr Lim. Justin turned to look at Angela, and she gave him a thumbs-up sign. Mr Lim's eyes widened in shock. He paused for a moment before telling Justin to stay back after school. Justin knew that he would be punished, but he felt an inexplicable sense of relief.

"Good job!" Angela said softly when Justin returned to his seat.
