When we got to our friend's house, we noticed that their dog greeted us but not their cat, Megs. Our friend, Robin, called to her to come in for her dinner, but she did not appear.

About ten minutes later (13) we heard the beep of a car horn, but did not think much of it because Robin lives on a busy road. Then we heard the car horn beeping again and again and I turned to Robin and asked (14) You want to check that out?"

Robin and I went out through the back door to investigate. We saw Megs inside Robin's van, walking across the dashboard and steering wheel, beeping the horn with her paws. She had somehow been locked in the van and was beeping the horn so that she could be found and released.

It was almost like she was shouting to us, "Please let me out of here (15)

We have been under the (21) impression that we would have robot maids, live on the moon, and zip around in flying cars before we hit the year 2000. We may have been a little (22) audacious, but at least the "flying car" fantasy is making some progress.

Futuristic carmaker Moller International has invented a "flying saucer" car that it hopes will (23) change the way we commute. If the company gets its way, we will be zipping about like the Jetsons sooner than we think.

According to Moller spokespeople, this eight-engine craft is spacious, easy to operate, can run on petrol, diesel or even ethanol. It takes off and lands vertically like a helicopter and can (24) hover up to three metres off the ground. Any higher and the driver would need a pilot's (25) licence. Now that will prove a task too much for many!

Read the passage below and answer questions 26 to 30.

The diver was amazed when he saw some dead green bodies lying at the bottom of the sea. He had been diving for sponges along the coast of the Greek island of Antikythera and did not expect such a gruesome find. He signalled to his friend, who quickly realised that the 'bodies' were actually bronze statues. They had apparently been in the sea for some time and had been turned green by the seawater.

The statues were part of the cargo of a ship that had sunk many years earlier. The wreck lay 60 metres under water. At that depth, diving is considered risky. However, a team of daring divers took up the challenge and retrieved the statues from the seabed. Some of the statues were that of a boy, a bearded man, what looked like a teacher, and even a huge bull. The bronze statues were very intricately carved and most of them had remained intact.

Much later, the wood of the sunken ship was analysed and it was established that the ship was built in Italy about 2200 years earlier. The owner of the ship might have been a Roman trader or a soldier. The Greek statues carried on the ship could have been stolen goods or they might have been purchased from a Greek sculptor. The ship was obviously bound for Italy when it sank.

Besides the statues, divers also found a rather complex-looking bronze machine with many wheels on it. Scientists studied the inside of the machine and discovered that it was used to calculate the movement of the sun and the moon. They were very fascinated by the ancient 'computer' and spent a great deal of time studying what it could do.

For each question from 26 to 30, four options are given. One of them is the correct answer. Make your choice (1, 2, 3 or 4). Shade the correct oval (1, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet.

(5 marks)

26. In the first paragraph, what do the words 'a gruesome find' refer to?

- (1) It refers to the divers and the seabed.
- (2) It refers to the coast of the Greek island of Antikythera.
- (3) It refers to the statues that looked like dead green bodies.
- (4) It refers to the sponges and various creatures found in the sea.

27. Which of the following sentences is incorrect?

- (1) The bronze statues had been in the sea for a long time.
- (2) The bronze statues come in a variety of shapes and sizes.
- (3) The bronze statues were at the bottom of the sea due to a shipwreck.
- (4) The bronze statues were turned green by the divers who tried to salvage them.

28. The phrase 'remained intact' in the second paragraph tells us that the bronze statues _____.

- (1) looked brand new
- (2) were not damaged
- (3) were intricately carved
- (4) were stolen goods from Greece

29. From the third paragraph, we can tell that the sunken ship was probably built by _____.

- (1) Roman soldiers
- (2) Greek sculptors
- (3) Italian carpenters
- (4) the owner of the ship

30. The Scientists were fascinated by the ancient 'computer' as it _____.

- (1) is made of bronze
- (2) has many wheels on it
- (3) contained an interior full of gadgets
- (4) is used to calculate the movement of the sun and the moon

It was before dawn in California. Rick Warren was at work on his home computer, exchanging e-mails with some of the pastors in his vast network around the world. One of them was a pastor who was working with the poor in Indonesia. Suddenly a message from a minister in Colombo, Sri Lanka, flashed up on his screen.

"Rick, please pray for us," he wrote on that December day in 2004. "We had a huge earthquake two minutes ago, and I'm sure a tidal wave is coming."

Warren, founder of Saddleback Church in Lake Forest, California, did more than pray. He immediately contacted church leaders in Thailand, Sri Lanka, Indonesia and India with a directive. "You have to head for high ground. This is a disaster in the making." The e-mails arrived before the tsunami hit.

10

The following Sunday, he showed his congregation photos of the damage done by the Tsunami and spoke to them about it. The donations that morning totalled US$1.6 million, about two times more than the usual Sunday offering. Warren sent it to the churches in the stricken region and it paid for everything from fishing nets to boat repairs.

15

Saddleback is a mega-church with affluent members residing in the hills of Orange County. It is one of the few in the world with the members and the means to manage such generosity. However, Warren is used to big numbers. Some 83,000 people worship at Saddleback, choosing from 28 church services on four campuses each week.

20

Helping the poor and needy was not always Warren's focus. He spent the first decade of his ministry building a bigger church. Then, his wife read an article about AIDS orphans in Africa and made her first two trips there to contribute as much as she could to helping these children.

25

Seeing that, Warren also considered it as a sign that he needed to refocus his ministry. "It was like the lights came on," he says. "I've got three advanced degrees from a Bible school. How did I miss the 2000 verses in the Bible where it talks about the impoverished?" Rick Warren had never looked back since that day.
