In 1926, Loi Ah Koon, came to Singapore from China and worked as an assistant at a coffee stall. After working for 10 years, Loi partnered with two other Chinese immigrants to set up their own business. They ran a coffee stall that served coffee, tea, charcoal-grilled toast and eggs at Telok Ayer Basin. His clientele included coolies, merchants, moneylenders, police inspectors and boat operators.

Loi roasted his own coffee beans using margarine and sugar over firewood, and prepared the toasted bread meticulously. He also often slept on the countertop of the stall in order to wake up on time to serve the first customers at 5 in the morning. Over the years, Loi's coffee stall grew into a familiar name due to its good coffee and kaya toast. The stall was renamed Ya Kun in 1972. Today, Ya Kun has approximately 70 stores in Singapore and 120 stores in 10 countries around the world.

Robots, Past and Present

In their early developmental stages, robots were primarily used in industrial settings. They were large, stationary machines that performed repetitive tasks. While effective, they lacked mobility and adaptability, which were essential to completing complex tasks.

However, technological advancements and the emergence of artificial intelligence have enabled robots to perform more functions in various environments. Today's robots are equipped with advanced sensors and other additional capabilities, allowing them to interact with the environment in real time.

Robots and Immersive Dining

In Immersive Dining, we leverage robots to enhance customer service and create memorable experiences. In addition to our original interactive dining concept, we have recently opened a space-themed outlet in Tech Park, specialising in weaving together the fields of robotics and dining.

The outlet provides a futuristic dining experience set against the backdrop of the blockbuster movie, Robochefs, where some robots set out to delight people with their wonderful cooking.

Visit our new outlet and embark on a culinary adventure. Indulge in delicious novel dishes that our team of celebrity chefs specially adapted from those featured in the movie. They will cook all dishes to suit local taste buds. Additionally, allow yourself to be absorbed into the movie's plot and relish the chance to be served by our robot waiters! They can gracefully navigate crowded dining spaces, interact with diners, and deliver the food with impeccable timing. Feel free to take photos of your experience or record it on video and share them with others!

Come to Immersive Dining with your family and friends and make the experience even more memorable!

Groups of three to five diners get 10% off, and larger groups get 15% off!

Come on weekdays between 2 p.m. and 5 p.m. and enjoy an additional 15% off!

Make a reservation at www.immerse.sg before 1 December 2024 to receive a free appetiser of your choice when you visit!

Customer Reviews

My family is looking forward to our next meal there!"

Refer to the passage below when you answer questions 71 to 80 in Booklet B.

I pondered over what to do next. Why not tell her? I might as well let her know that I had fulfilled her wish for Father to walk again. Six months ago, when I first saw Father struggling to move, my heart sank. The sight of him unable to walk or work filled me with sadness. Father's condition had affected our family in many ways. He was the sole breadwinner of the family, and with another baby on the way, our financial struggles seemed insurmountable. Over the past few weeks, I had poured my heart into finding a way to help Father regain his mobility. She would no longer have to anguish over the challenges we faced. The more I pondered over it, the more I felt compelled to share the news with her. She would surely be overjoyed!

"Mother, I went up to the waterfall on the mountains," I said as I stepped into the house.

Hearing my voice, Mother felt a weight off her shoulder and our eyes met for a moment. However, upon realizing what I had done, her relief quickly turned into anger. "The mountain? What were you doing there, Obayd? It is so dangerous. Even thinking about the journey there makes me shudder," she exclaimed.

"Have you ever tried finding a rainbow? Not just finding it but reaching it? It's so strange. They're always a little farther away. You go, and then somehow, it's gone," I continued. "But I found the waterfall! I found it on my own. Father told me where it was, but I went there by myself."

Alia had a strange look on her face, as if I was speaking a language she did not understand. Neela had the same look. I felt the divide between my sisters and me widening even more. Being girls, they could not possibly imagine how I had embarked on such a treacherous journey. I could not help but feel myself swelling with pride. "I passed under a rainbow, Mother. Father would be well again!" I said, full of hope.

My mother was hunched forward, her fingers pressing on her temples. She was upset, but not the way she was a few minutes ago. "Please tell me a better truth than that," she whispered.

"A better truth? This is what you wanted, isn't it? Wouldn't you want a way to make Father walk again? Mother, that's the only way we knew to make it real. We had to pass under the rainbow so that our wishes would come true. You told me so!" I said, hurt that she thought I had lied to her.

"Obayd," she moaned. "That's a legend we tell children. But it's not true. Nothing happens when you pass under a rainbow." Sensing the tension in the room, Neela began picking at imaginary lint on her skirt. As the oldest, she felt responsible for our actions. Alia was on the brink of tears as she whispered, "Please don't be angry with Obayd, Mother."

"How do you know it hadn't worked, Mother? I am sure Father has changed. When he wakes up from his nap in your room, his legs will be as good as new!" I exclaimed.

Looking at me as if I had grown a second head, Mother explained, "Obayd, the only thing that has changed is that you're soaked and probably going to wake up with pneumonia. We thought something terrible had happened to you and your father..."

Before Mother could continue her sentence, the front door burst open. Looking up in the direction of the door, my mouth fell agape. In front of me, with one foot on the ground and his stump on the wooden crutch I had made for him, stood my breathless, sweating father.

"Obayd!" My name came out in an exhausted bellow as Father wiped his forehead with the back of his hand. Clearly, his attempts to walk had taken its toll.

"Father, you're finally using it! You're walking! It works, doesn't it? Mother, Father's walking," I exclaimed, barely waiting for either parent to respond.

Taking a few steps into the room and dropping the wooden crutch, Father slid down the wall and sat with his leg and stump stretched out in front of him. Still trying to catch his breath, he began, "Obayd, I've been out looking for you for hours. Your mother was convinced you were dead! Do you have any idea what you've put us through? I would never have been able to walk if not for my fear that you were in danger." Looking into Father's eyes at that moment, I realised the reason why Father could walk again. I never believed in rainbows again.

Bread has a rich history that reaches back at least 30 000 years. Historically, the first bread _____ made from roasted cereal grains and water, which was then made into a "grain-paste" and cooked. This flatbread still has a legacy in many parts of the world _____ similar items are still made today. In Mexico, tortillas are descendants of this flatbread. The Indian chappati, Armenian lavishes, Scottish oatcakes and North American johnnycakes are too. Clearly, flatbread is still prevalent in many varieties _____ the world!

Flatbread was a huge part of Sumerian diets. Sumerians made a flat cake _____ barley. Another flatbread variant, known as "ta", was eaten in Egypt in the 12th century BC. In ancient Greek, a variety of flatbread, consisting of flour and oil, was offered as a tribute _____ the gods.

The consumption of bread was vital to the formation of the earliest human societies. As farming replaced hunting, groups of people were forced to settle down. The need to harvest grains _____ a yearly basis led to the development of settlements and towns. In the Middle Ages, a large loaf of bread was used to set the table and would be used as a "plate". If the host desired, the bread _____ be eaten, given away to the poor or fed to the dogs. _____, wooden trays replaced the bread as a "dish".

If you are familiar with the saying "The best thing since sliced bread", it was Otto Frederick Rohwedder _____ invented the slicing machine for bread in 1928. Since his machine both sliced and wrapped the bread, maybe the saying should be "The best thing since sliced and wrapped bread".

Today, bread is still just as popular _____ it was back in the day and is a staple in many homes. Sadly though, technological advances have allowed bread to become mass-produced to such an extent that it has lost nearly all its nutritional qualities.

The mental health benefits of being in nature have long been acknowledged, whether through activities like listening to birdsong or taking a walk in the park. While birdwatchers are often portrayed as boring, a study shows that even half an hour of bird watching could (39)  (40)  make us happier, healthy and help foster a deeper connekksion with nature.

So, why is birdwatching so good for us?

Biophilia could be a part of it. Biophilia is the belief that humans have an efinity with (41)  nature, so being in natural surroundings made us feel well. Biodiversity could be part of an (42)  (43)  answer too. Research suggests that biodiversity is a natural medeecin that can help reduce (44)  medicine (45)  stress and encouragement physical activity.

Unlike the "boring birder" stereotype, birdwatching is not a dull, passive activity. It is (46)  an engaging perspot that captivates the mind. Just like beekeepers, birdwatchers experience (47)  a deep engagement and profound sense of trankwility through hours of observing their (48)  subjects. Like birdwatchers, beekeepers can become as absorbed in their observations that (49)  they lose track of time and their surroundings. This immersion triggers a psykological flow, a (50)  mental state where we feel our best and perform by our peak. After being "in the flow", birdwatchers can experience a deep sense of satisfaction and wellbeing.

Fill in each blank with a suitable word.

There is nothing quite like a big hug. An embrace can show affection, offer condolences, be greeting _____ a goodbye, and provide comfort to a loved one. A warm _____ (51) _____ often creates a calming or relaxing feeling. That is because oxytocin, sometimes (52) _____ called the "cuddle" hormone, is released when people or pets snuggle _____ to us. The (53) _____ oxytocin released has been found _____ reduce inflammation and improve wound (54) _____ healing. Reduced cravings for drugs and sweets as well as lower levels of stress have also been _____ with the "cuddle" hormone. (55)

Giving someone a firm, reassuring hug before or during a _____ event can help (56) _____ them stay calm because your hug increases their oxytocin level. In fact, scientists say that giving another person support _____ touch can even reduce the stress of the person doing (57) _____ the comforting. _____ to the way that a hug reduces stress, it also decreases pain. A (58) _____ 20-second hug can release enough oxytocin to make you feel better. Research suggests that weighted _____ simulate being held or hugged. The weight of the blanket creates (59) _____ pressure points that relieve anxiety and can help one sleep.

A hug a day may, in fact, _____ the doctor away. One study showed that the (60) _____ more often people received social support and hugs, the less _____ they were to get (61) _____ sick. Hugging increases serotonin. Also known as the "feel good" _____, it is produced (62) _____ and spread in the brain, making us feel calm and confident. When serotonin levels are high, we feel good about ourselves. Low levels of serotonin can cause sleep disorders and depression. It can even _____ to obesity. Hugging triggers the release of serotonin to create happiness and (63) _____ help diminish sad feelings.

Instinctively, we want to hug our friends or loved ones _____ are in pain. In a (64) _____ non-verbal way, hugs communicate peace and understanding. Do not _____ the (65) _____ healing power of a hug! Just as we exercise to stay in shape and watch what we eat to stay healthy, a hug can boost the mood and connection we have with the people we care about.
