Many schools in Singapore are currently grappling with a severe lack of canteen vendors. Individual stallholders often find it difficult to operate with many financial constraints. Moreover, the rising cost of ingredients and a lack of manpower have forced many vendors to cease operations. To address this issue, several schools are exploring alternatives such as the central kitchen model.

Under the new model, catering companies will supply meals directly to the schools. Students will be able to collect their pre-ordered food seamlessly from automated machines using their smart cards. Vendors will also be able to cater to the dietary needs of students more effectively. Schools believe this innovative approach will ensure that students can obtain their meals promptly. This will reduce the time needed to wait in queues during their recess break.

– Ansel, 12-year-old student

Text 2

The extract below is taken from an online article.

School bags are designed to be both functional and trendy, which makes them appealing to students. Lately, more focus has been put on making school bags look good. For many students, their school bag is also a way to express their personality and personal style. Is that true for you, too?

While it may seem exciting to fit everything into one stylish bag, have you considered the impact on your health? Carrying too many items or a heavy bag strains your back. This may cause short-term discomfort and lead to long-term posture problems. To cushion the effect, you should carry a school bag that fits comfortably on your back. Features such as wide straps and padded backs help distribute weight more evenly. By choosing a school bag wisely, you can reduce the pressure on your back.

Ultimately, health experts recommend packing only the items needed for the day to keep your school bag light. For example, store certain items in your school locker or keep some materials under your desk if your school allows it. By planning what you bring each day and leaving out unnecessary items, you can protect your back and still have everything you need.

For each question from 21 to 25, shade your answer (1, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet.

21. "Carry Everything in Style." The purpose of this statement in Text 1 is to _____.
- (1) emphasise the bag's storage capacity
 - (2) highlight that the bag is useful and trendy
 - (3) remind students of what they must carry to school
 - (4) encourage students to care about how they look
22. Why was Ansel featured in Text 1?
- (1) He appears to be a good student.
 - (2) The school bag is designed for users of his age.
 - (3) His review was short enough to fit into the poster.
 - (4) What he said supports the claims made in the poster.
23. Based on Text 1, which of the following statements are true about the Peaks school bag?
- A: The bag is small and light.
B: The bag comes in different colours.
C: The bag has multiple compartments.
- (1) A and B
 - (2) A and C
 - (3) B and C
 - (4) A, B and C
24. What is the main message of Text 2?
- (1) Students should prioritise comfort when choosing a bag.
 - (2) Students should choose school bags with more features.
 - (3) Students should express their personality and personal style.
 - (4) Students should use lockers or desks to store their belongings.
25. Text 1 and Text 2 express differing views on whether _____.
- (1) students can store certain items in school
 - (2) school bags should look appealing to students
 - (3) school bags can fit everything needed for school
 - (4) students should fit everything into their school bags

The first night of the Primary 5 camp was difficult for Ryan. As the dormitory lights dimmed, the quiet forest outside made his heart beat faster. Unlike Marcus, who was already snoring loudly, Ryan lay sleepless in the dark. This was his first time staying away from home, and the thin, hard mattress made him miss his own comfortable bed.
The next morning, the students headed to the High Elements course, which began with a daunting ten-metre climb. Marcus was appointed the group leader, and it was no surprise — during the practice sessions in school, he was the only one who had mastered all the safety knots. After putting on his safety gear, he checked every classmate's harness with a sharp gaze. Mr Lim, their form teacher, stood at the side observing him quietly, his clipboard tucked under his arm.	5
Marcus scaled the rock wall with ease, but when it was Ryan's turn, his legs began to shake like jelly. He took one look at the sheer height of the wall and froze. "Ryan! Don't just stand there! Start climbing! Everyone else is waiting for you," Marcus shouted from above. Ryan felt embarrassed. His face turned a deep crimson as the other students watched him tremble.	10
Later that afternoon, the class went for a long hiking expedition. Exhausted, Ryan had slowed and was lagging behind. He often stopped to catch his breath. Marcus had a single-minded will to be the first group to reach the checkpoint. Suddenly, he snatched Ryan's water bottle. "You're drinking too much and stopping too often!" Marcus shouted. He shoved the bottle into his own bag and stomped off. Ryan stared wide-eyed at Marcus's back. The outburst caused the class to stop and murmur. Ryan felt his eyes moisten, but he forced himself to keep walking in silence. From the back of the group, Mr Lim saw everything but kept his distance.	15
By evening, Ryan was in a sullen mood. During dinner, he sat alone at the edge of the campsite. "All Marcus cares about is that silly trophy," he muttered under his breath.	20
That night, Ryan could not sleep. He slipped out to the washroom to splash some water on his face. Near the benches, he heard soft sobbing. To his surprise, he saw Marcus sitting on the ground with his head between his knees. Marcus was holding the brass compass so tightly that his knuckles were white. Ryan froze. His first instinct was to walk away, but remembering how Marcus had treated him, he decided to stay and taunt his tormentor. However, as he watched Marcus shaking, his anger began to soften. Then he noticed an inscription on the back of the compass: Best Camper. Realising that the compass held sentimental value for Marcus, Ryan felt a lump forming in his throat.	25
"It's just a camp, Marcus," Ryan said gently. Marcus jumped and tried to hide it. "Go away," he snapped, but his voice was shaky and lacked its usual confidence. Ryan sat down nearby. "I'm so homesick I can't even eat," he admitted. Marcus finally relaxed and held up the compass. "This was my brother's. He had won 'Best Camper' three years ago. My parents expect me to be just like him, but it's a Herculean task." Ryan finally understood why Marcus had behaved the way he did — he was terrified of letting his family down.	30
The next morning, during the outdoor cooking session, Ryan struggled to light his fire. The tiny flame kept flickering out in the breeze, and his pot of water remained cold. Before he could give up, Marcus came over and crouched beside him. "Stack the fuel tablets like this. It keeps the flame going," he said, arranging them. He used his own body to block the wind while Ryan tried again. When the fire was lit, Ryan watched the steady glow with a grateful smile.	35
From across the campsite, Mr Lim watched the interaction between the two boys. He nodded approvingly, thinking that sometimes, the most important lessons at camp had nothing to do with knots or rock walls.	40

Plastic waste is everywhere. Every day, an astonishing amount of plastic waste enough to fill 2,000 garbage trucks _____ dumped into the ocean. Plastic litter (26) can be found at the bottom of the ocean and on top of Mount Everest. Surprisingly, plastic waste has now turned _____ on the backs of hermit crabs! (27)

Hermit crabs are tiny animals with soft, curly bodies _____ leave them (28) vulnerable to predators. _____ their tails are fragile, they must constantly look (29) for empty shells to protect _____ from hungry birds and fishes. Studies show (30) out of 16 land species _____ been observed wearing plastic waste, such as (31) bottle caps, and _____ broken lightbulbs. (32)

Last week, I went to a local theatre to see a performance of Chicken Little. The (36)
story followed a clear sequanse of events that everyone could easily follow. It began (37)
when a small object accidental hit the main character, making her think the sky was (38)
falling. Overwhelmed by fear, she quickly spreading her panic, all the other animals in the woods.

(39) (40)
I thurruhly enjoyed the acting of the performers. Their high-energy seens made (41)
the play realistic and comical. They cleverly used fast dialog to show how confused they were as they ran around the stage. In the final act, the characters realised the (42)
importance of not jump to conclusions.

(43)
It provided plenty of laughter while conveying a valued lesson about seeking the
(44) (45)
truth. I would certainly rekkomend this show to anyone who enjoying a fun story with a deep meaning. The performance is a perfect example of how theatre can teach us important things while making us laugh.

Blind boxes are small toys sold in sealed packaging. Buyers do not know what they will get (46) they open them. Although blind boxes feel like a modern trend, the idea is not (47) In the 1950's, mystery prize tickets, also (48) as Tikam-Tikam, were so common in Singapore that every street corner had a vendor selling them. The 1950's Tikam-Tikam craze led many children and even adults to extreme (49) such as shoplifting just to get what they want. In (50) months, such acts have also been reported by shops selling blind boxes here.

So (51) are blind boxes so appealing? One reason is our human desire to collect. People enjoy gathering complete sets, especially when some items are (52) in quantity. When a rare piece is finally found, it feels as if a difficult (53) has been successfully completed. Another reason is social influence where collectors share their (54) online through posts and live videos. Seeing others unbox rare items creates excitement and encourages more people to (55) the trend.

However, the randomness of blind boxes creates a cycle of anticipation (56) to gambling. People keep buying more boxes in (57) of getting a rare item, only to end up with duplicates. Over time, this cycle can be hard to (58) and the behaviour may even become addictive. This leads to risky spending (59) where people frequently spend more than intended or buy repeatedly without realising how quickly the cost is adding up. As a result, governments are considering rules and (60) to better protect consumers, like the ban on Tikam-Tikam in 1961. Although blind boxes can be fun, it is important to know the potential harms and act responsibly.
