Last Saturday, my classmates and I attended an environmental awareness talk at a community club. During the session, the speaker explained how plastic pollution was harming marine life. I was shocked to learn that many sea animals become entangled in plastic waste or mistake it for food. It was alarming to hear that millions of tonnes of plastic enter the oceans every year.

After the talk, my friend Ben and I were inspired to make a change. We both took up simple habits, such as bringing reusable water bottles, metal straws and shopping bags whenever we went out. Our teacher reminded us that every small action mattered. I realised that making these important changes would help reduce plastic waste in the world.

Since then, I have consistently avoided single-use plastics and encouraged my family to do the same. Together, we can protect marine life and keep our environment clean for future generations.

- to foster school spirit

Date: 18 September 2026

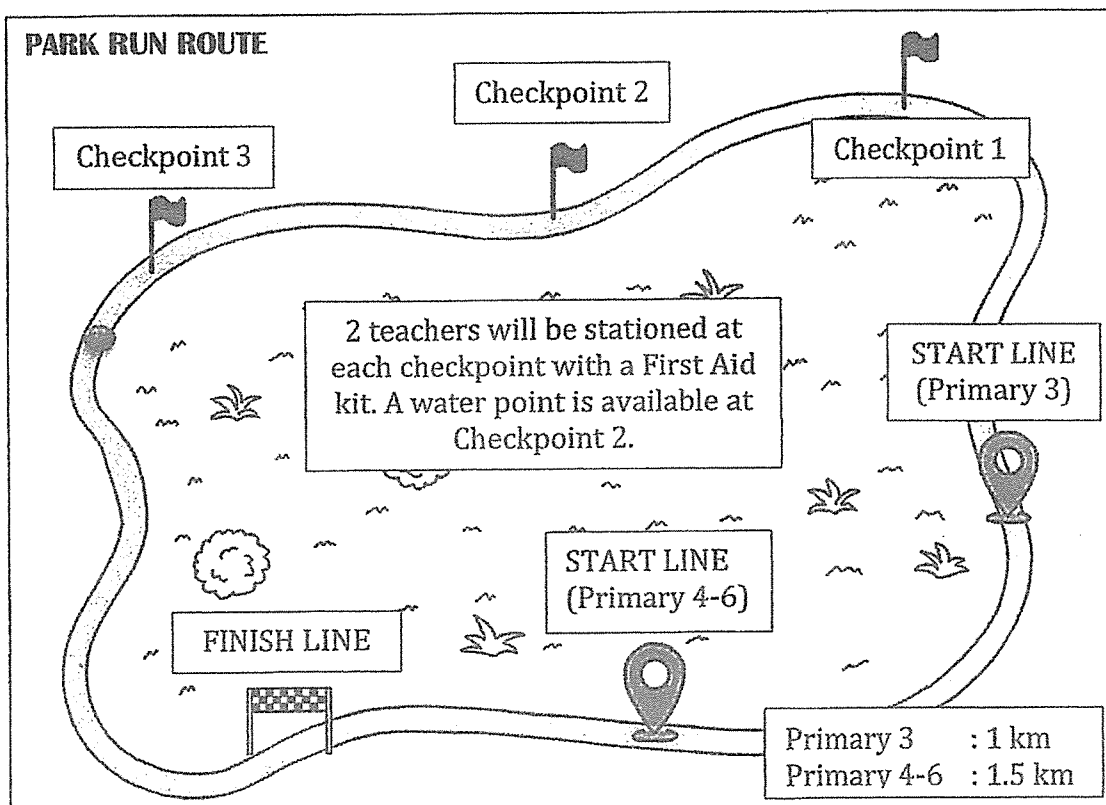

Reporting time: 8.15 a.m.

for Primary 3 to 6 pupils

(Primary 1 and 2 pupils will remain in school for the Sports Carnival)

Assemble at the basketball court (near the entrance) for attendance taking before setting off for everyone's favourite park, Elizabeth Gardens.

PARK RUN ROUTE

Text 2

The extract below, from a school newsletter, is a pupil's thoughts about the upcoming school park run.

The annual park run is not just about running. It is about coming together as a school community to get active and have fun. When we all join in, whether we are fast or slow, we learn to support one another. Even when it is tough, we keep going because we know our friends are there to cheer us on. Winning is not the only goal. It is also about self-motivation to complete the entire course from start to end and having a sense of achievement as a result.

Running with our classmates makes us feel like we are part of something big and exciting. We show determination, encourage one another and feel a sense of pride. Moreover, it's a great way to stay fit. With each step, we are building our endurance and growing stronger, both physically and mentally.

So, let's hit the trail and embrace the adventure of the park run! Together, we will run, laugh and make memories that will last a lifetime.

For each question from 21 to 25, choose the best answer. Shade your answer (1, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet. (5 marks)

21 "Ready for our school's Park Run?" Why did the writer ask this question in Text 1?

- (1) to share the purpose of the run
- (2) to get pupils excited before the run
- (3) to invite pupils to take part in the run
- (4) to mentally prepare pupils for the run

22 Which of the following statements is true of the run?

- (1) This is the first year it is being held.
- (2) The venue is West Coast Primary School.
- (3) Pupils from Primary 1 to 6 will participate in it.
- (4) All pupils will complete the run at the same point.

23 Based on text 2, which of the following is not mentioned as a benefit of taking part in the park run?

- (1) building endurance
- (2) growing mentally stronger
- (3) winning medals and prizes
- (4) feeling a sense of pride for the school

24 In text 2, what does the writer mean by "part of something big and exciting"?

- (1) Pupils are part of a race as a full school.
- (2) Pupils are excited to run with their friends.
- (3) Pupils are running in a famous park that is big.
- (4) Pupils are taking part in an exciting event as a community.

25 Which idea is expressed in both Text 1 and Text 2?

- (1) Pupils should encourage peers who are slow runners.
- (2) Running with friends helps to create lasting memories.
- (3) Running as a school improves fitness and builds bonds.
- (4) Pupils get a sense of achievement from completing a run.

Please note that the passage for the Comprehension questions 66 to 75 in Booklet B is on the next page. You may now go on to Booklet B.

Twelve-year-old Darto sat under a banyan tree with his friends Arif and Siti. Life moved slowly in their quiet village—far too slowly for Darto, whose imagination could power a small city. If there was ever trouble, the villagers knew there was a good chance he had something to do with it. Moreover, much to their annoyance, Darto insisted on chasing and frightening their chickens.

Arif said, "Uncle Banu has a chicken that cannot be caught. He calls it Putih." 5

"Can't be caught? Ha! Catching Putih will be easy! Then everyone will admit I am the best chicken chaser in the village!" Darto exclaimed, jumping to his feet, his eyes lit up.

That night, Darto, followed by his friends, crept quietly into Uncle Banu's yard. There, he saw a sleek, white bird pecking at the ground near the coop. Just then, the lights in Uncle Banu's house turned on. Darto froze, his heart beating so fast he thought it might burst. For a while nothing happened. He kept an eye on the house and made his move only when he saw the lights go out. Darto walked slowly towards Putih, his hands stretched out towards it, trying to appear as harmless as possible. 10

As soon as it spotted Darto, Putih fixed its gaze on him and cocked its head. Then, as though realising his true intentions, Putih bolted. Darto scrambled after the bird as it darted through the yard like a feathery lightning bolt, weaving between banana trees and leaping over piles of firewood. Darto stayed close behind, but the chicken was faster—and far cleverer. It led him into a muddy ditch, then through a thorny bush that left his arms covered in scratches. By the time he emerged, he was exhausted, bleeding and coated in mud. 15

"I told you he couldn't do it!" shouted Siti. Arif and Siti were laughing so hard they could barely breathe. Cheeks burning, Darto glared at his friends, then at the Putih, who was perched smugly on the roof of Uncle Banu's goat shed. It was clear that Putih was no ordinary chicken and could not be underestimated. However, it was he, Darto, who would have the final victory! If he could not outrun it, then he would outsmart it! 20

The next day, Darto borrowed a fishing net from his aunt and a handful of corn from his mother. When he reached the chicken yard, he saw a crowd of children. Unknown to Darto, word of his mission had spread through the village thanks to Arif and Siti. They cheered him on as if he were a hero in a great battle. Even Uncle Banu was there. Darto's stomach fluttered at the sight of so many eyes on him. However, Darto waved to his audience, smiled, and loudly declared that Putih had no chance. 25

Darto scattered the corn near the chicken coop and hid, holding the net at the ready. After several minutes, Putih appeared. It approached the corn cautiously, pecking at the ground, but always kept its distance. Losing patience, Darto lunged forward, throwing the net with all his might. But Putih was too far away, and the net landed uselessly on the ground. Then, with a loud squawk, it launched itself at Darto, claws outstretched. Darto dodged and ran for his life. 30

"Help!" Darto screamed, running in circles as the chicken chased him, the crowd roaring with laughter. Exhausted, Darto was finally ready to admit defeat. Head hung low, he went to Uncle Banu to apologise, expecting a scolding. 35

To his surprise, Uncle Banu simply laughed and ruffled his hair. "There is no shame losing to Putih, you know. My grandfather raised it from an egg and it's been keeping me on my toes ever since."

Darto blinked. "Wait . . . how old is Putih?"

Uncle Banu smiled. "Older than you'd believe." 40

Trying to catch Putih became something of a tradition among the children after that. Even Darto made several more attempts. Although he never did catch Putih, he did not mind. He realised that the chase was more fun than the catch. From that day on, whenever Putih strutted through the village, clucking like it owned the place, Darto could not help but smile.

Because in his village even a chicken could be a legend. 45
