A gifted teacher, Anne Sullivan, is best known for her work with Helen Keller, a deaf, blind and mute child whom she had taught to communicate.

Sullivan and her two siblings grew up in poverty-stricken conditions and struggled with health problems. At the age of five, Sullivan contracted an eye disease called trachoma, which severely damaged her sight. She learned about schools for the blind and was insistent to get an education as a means to escape poverty.

Sullivan attended the Perkins School for the Blind in 1880 and underwent surgery to help better her limited vision. Despite the physical strain on her own limited sight, Sullivan helped Keller continue her studies at Radcliffe College in 1900. She spelled the notes of class lectures on Keller's hand and spent hours conveying information from textbooks to her. As a result, Keller became the first deaf-blind person to graduate from college.

(17)

IMAGINE A WORLD OUT GIANT PANDA

Giant pandas are endangered because of poaching and their reliance on bamboo forests. Humans have cleared out much of their habitat and it is difficult to relocate them because of their diet. Giant pandas also have a low birth rate in captivity and in the wild and will soon be on their way to extinction.

Text 2

The extract below is taken from an online article about giant pandas.

Description

Giant pandas are the black and white bears that live in the bamboo forests of southwestern China. They are omnivores but eat mostly bamboo shoots and leaves - up to 12 kilograms a day. Rare and vulnerable, there are only about 1,500 surviving giant pandas in the wild. They are solitary animals, but communicate through various sounds, such as chirps, honks, bleats, and barks.

Conservation

Giant pandas are currently endangered. This is due to the excessive cutting down of trees, which has resulted in a massive loss of habitat. The rising levels of carbon dioxide and global warming are also contributing factors.

Imagine a future when giant pandas can only be found in picture books. We are responsible for the crisis of their extinction. Therefore, we are the only ones who can stop it. Let's do our part and take action now. There are organisations that can help you start this journey to create a better future for generations to come.

For each question from 21 to 25, choose the best answer. Shade your answer (1, 2, 3 or 4) on the Optical Answer Sheet. (5 marks)

- 21 According to the advertisement in Text 1, which of the following is not true for the decreasing number of giant pandas?
- (1) illegal hunting
 - (2) low reproduction
 - (3) change of habitats
 - (4) loss of bamboo forests
- 22 "Imagine a world without giant pandas." What is the main reason for the writer to make this statement in Text 1?
- (1) to raise ticket sales of the digital documentary
 - (2) to create excitement for the immersive experience
 - (3) to allocate more land to create natural habitats for giant pandas
 - (4) to raise awareness on the importance of saving the environment
- 23 Based on the advertisement in Text 1, which organisation works closely with Science Centre in this event?
- (1) Kids Stop
 - (2) Snow City
 - (3) Ministry of Education
 - (4) Digital Dome Theatre
- 24 According to Text 2, giant pandas "eat mostly bamboo shoots and leaves - up to 12 kilograms a day". The writer warns about the danger of _____ that will affect the pandas' diet.
- (1) pollution
 - (2) poaching
 - (3) conservation
 - (4) deforestation
- 25 The heading in Text 1 supports Text 2 as _____.
- (1) the number of giant pandas is dwindling
 - (2) giant pandas prefer living on their own without company
 - (3) we need to work with the organisations to save the giant pandas
 - (4) giant pandas may only be found in books and movies in the near future

Please note that the passage for Comprehension questions 66 to 75 is on the next page. You may now go on to Booklet B.

Refer to the passage below when you answer questions 66 to 75 in Booklet B.

Matt and Brian were two very close friends who owned rental cabins on Shields Mountains in Tennessee, USA! Rental cabins are a popular type of guesthouse among tourists who have decided to camp on the mountains for a night or two. One night, the men were forced to play an unlikely role, rescuing tourists from the flames of a(raging fire) on the mountain. That night, ~~Matt~~ got a frantic call from his mother "The mountain is on fire and Brian's up there!" she screamed. Brian was apparently 5 up there trying to put the fire out by himself.

2 Matt drove by the main road to reach the cabins, only to see police officers blocking all the traffic at a junction. He turned around and headed for an alternative route. He was halfway up the winding path before his car gave up. He managed to borrow a van from a passer-by. He drove up the mountain to join Brian, so they could fight the battle together. Both of them headed first to Brian's 10 cluster of rental cabins. Brian wanted to make sure all his guests had left the cabins and he was glad that they had.

Then, Brian had to make a choice. It was either to save his cabins or rescue the people renting other cabins nearby. These people were tourists who did not know their way around the area.

The two friends travelled across the smoky mountain, knocking on the cabin doors to alert 15 tourists about the emergency and then led them to safety. Brian hopped into a tourist's car and drove the family down the mountain on roads enveloped in smoke and virtually impassable. "I know every nook and cranny of this mountain. Luckily, it came in handy," Brian said.

Matt followed him in his van, and when one family was a safe distance from the fire, Brian and Matt would take the van back up the mountain to look for another trapped person. They helped an 20 elderly woman flee across hot gravel to reach her car, and they found a man nearly unconscious in a burning cabin. Thanks to their unplanned ferry service, both of them evacuated fourteen people.

"I owe that guy my life," said Steve, who had lived on the mountain for many years. Steve's home was burnt to a crisp, but he survived after Brian had picked him up and driven him to the foot 25 of the mountain.

On the way down the mountain with the last survivor, Brian and Matt got separated in the heavy smoke and flames. Matt drove the survivor's car and went to look for Brian. By then, the flames had licked the gravel road. Matt was forced to press a wet towel against his nose and mouth to prevent himself from suffocating.

He found Brian near the cabin they had just evacuated, gasping for breath. Matt helped him 30 into his van and gave him a bottle of water to drink. Soon after, Brian regained his composure and managed to drive his van. He followed Matt closely behind. With flames blocking him on either side, Matt stepped on his car accelerator and slammed right through a tree lying across the road. Brian did the same and minutes later, they were off the mountain.

The fire did not claim a single life on Shields Mountain. However, Brian's home was destroyed 35 and he lost some of the cabins he owned to the fire. With so much to rebuild, he only had one gleam of hope to bring closure. "I wasn't worried about the property damage, especially when I saw those families trapped on the mountain," he said. "I just want to know that their lives are going to go on. It makes it all worthwhile," he said.

For many fishermen, catching a blue lobster is a rare occurrence. However, two Canadian fishermen celebrated capturing not one, _____ two of these bright blue lobsters off the coast of Nova Scotia recently. (26)

Usually, lobsters caught near the Atlantic coast of North America are not very brightly-coloured. Hence, these two fishermen made the news when they caught two vivid blue lobsters _____ quick succession on the very same day. This is traditionally considered to be a sign of good fortune. (27)

The probability of the creature having this colouring _____ widely regarded as being one in two million. However, Dr David Spiegelhalter, a professor, is inclined to pour a bit of cold water on the story. Based _____ data collected, he estimates that about 200 million lobsters are caught in the North Atlantic every year. On average, that equates to about 100 blue ones turning _____ in a year. "So for two lobsters to be caught three days apart, quite close to each _____, does not seem at all surprising," says Dr Spiegelhalter. (28) (29) (30) (31)

Bright blue lobsters are so-coloured because of a genetic abnormality that causes _____ to produce more of a certain protein than others. Thus, they stand _____ from the rest of a catch. (32) (33)

"Anything bright blue would look very odd because the American lobster is usually a sort of green-brown," says Charlie Ellis, another researcher. He added that for most European fishermen, they would not be extremely surprised _____ catching a blue lobster. This is because the lobsters in the European seas tend to be of a duller blue in colour, although the real sort of shimmering blue is _____ relatively rare. Thus, for a European fisherman, catching a blue lobster would not call for a great celebration. (34) (35)

Each of the underlined words contains either a spelling or grammatical error. Write the correct word in each of the boxes. (10 marks)

When I was very young, due to my father's work, my family moved to Singapore.

(36)
It was a happy time. My father was doing well in his job. We lived comfortable with the occasional luxury such as enjoying British biskits and other goodies. My father bought toys for us too. Some of my toys was ordered from Robinsons, a famous

(37)

(38)

(39)
department store, which ocuppied a big building in Raffles Place. I had a rocking horse

(40)
from there once, but I cut down its tail, thinking it would grow again but it was a big mistake.

When I was about six years old, I went to a nearby primary school run by a

(41)
Tamil schoolmaster. All I could remember about my lessons was the excitment of learning my ABC. The whole school enviroment brought joy to my learning.

(42)

(43)
At home, we spoke only Tamil. In my father's office, he and his calleques spoke

English and I began to pick up some English at school.

(44)
One of the earliest events I should recall was going off to school in Singapore.

(45)
My father took me there by taxi, together with my sisters. My only recollect of the journey was my first sight of Newton Circus. In those days, it was just a roundabout.
